JOHNSON
SHOYAMA
GRADUATE SCHOOL OF PUBLIC POLICY
UREGINA ▾ USASK

Offered by the Education University of Hong Kong and the University of Saskatchewan

The summer school is a week-long workshop and competition that serves as an introductory primer to different facets of public affairs and management in different sectors around the world. Five days of faculty-led workshops will be followed by a two-day long policy analysis competition.

Through seminars featuring academicians and public management practitioners, case studies, activity sessions, students gain insight and develop skills to understand real-world public affairs and management issues. Based upon this learning students work in groups to compete in the policy analysis competition, where they have 48 hours to present their solutions to a novel case-study situation. Certificates will be awarded to the top three teams and to all students for their participation.

Topics covered in the summer school:

Health Policy, Refugee Issues, Policy Analysis, Data Use, Climate Policy, SMART cities, Human Resources Management

Who can participate: Current or recently qualified undergraduate and graduate students from all academic backgrounds with an interest in public affairs and public management are welcome
